To whom it may concern

I am not in favour of the Euthanasia laws and expect patient assisted deaths to be changed.

It has been proven Euthanasia laws have led to abuse, and death of people who have not given their consent, this must be avoided at all costs.

I understand why people need choice, when they are suffering and in pain. That is why spending more money on good hospice care is so vital. So people can die with dignity and in a loving way.

Spend more money on research, so people are given proper pain relief, so they can still function. It appals me that currently, people cannot be given adequate pain relief without making them almost unconscious, that is not living. People in pain & suffering want relief so they can still function or at least when the end is near be able to communicate with their loved ones. Not be in bed like a vegetable.

Yours Faithfully
